The Varroa Mite Is The #1 Threat To Bee Health

Know Your Enemy

- Varroa mites have been confirmed in all 50 states
- Female mite is flat with a reddish - brown oval body, they are are about 1.6 mm wide x 1.1 mm long, and can be found on either adult or immature bees
- Brood must be present in the hive for the mite to reproduce
- Mites will over-winter in the cluster on their host bee which reduces winter survivability
- The Varroa mite reduces hive health and increases susceptibility to other diseases and viruses
- Varroa has developed resistance to many of the existing control agents
- Mites have killed most feral colonies plus hundreds of thousands of managed colonies worldwide resulting in billions of dollars of economic loss for beekeepers

Stop The Varroa Mite Now With

HopGuard™

Tough On Varroa - Gentle On Bees!

Composed of all food grade material!

Studies on very heavily infested commercial hives in Northern California showed a significant mite drop with normal colony behavior observed in all treated hives during and after treatment with HopGuard™

- Works on contact
- Saturated cardboard strips are hung over brood frames at the rate of 1 strip for every 5 frames of bees
- Treatment is most effective when brood rearing is at it's lowest
- HopGuard™ may be used in brood chambers up to 3 times per year even during a honey flow
- Always read and follow label directions

*Free shipping applies to most orders over $100 in the lower 48 states. Prices subject to change without notice.
